Waka Kotahi NZ Transport Agency's response:

- The purpose of completing the Resilience Strategic Approach work for the four regions effected by the Cyclone is to ensure that from a strategic resilience and future needs point of view are being considered for each region with our partners.
- The current outputs from the Resilience Strategic Approach work are still high-level assumptions; for example, more resilience investment is required on SH2 between Gisborne and Wairoa to ensure the level of service and reliability is improved. Once further work is completed, programmes for each corridor will be created.
- This approach helps inform more focused business cases for affected sections of the transport system, taking resilience into account.
- The intention of the work is to establish a corridor view on what would be an appropriate level of service for resilience, considering the strategic importance and role of these corridors.
