These missing rocks and the river directing at the North Abutment - where it went- appear to be key.

Hi [s 9\(2\)\(a\)](mailto:s 9(2)(a)@gmail.com)

There was a temporary bank put in upstream of the bridge to divert the channel while they repaired the groins on the north bank, and that is probably disappearing, which is what is supposed to happen to it. The groins have been repaired now, so all should be fine, hopefully for a while. First test coming now, by the sounds of things.

Regards
Colin

Hi Colin / Brendon

Just got a call from a concerned person, apparently with the channel works above the bridge the river is pointed towards the North bridge Abutment and some rocks are missing. They said it was not critical now but may be an issue if we get a good rain. DOC emailed saying we were getting rain tomorrow I think.

As you know I have no skills in this area and so do not perform any river monitoring for these sort of things so can't make any risk assessment. I am simply passing on the information. I have not looked myself.

Regards/ Nga mihi
