

Mark Scowen Photography

TIROHANGA WHĀNUI WALKING AND CYCLING BRIDGE

Cyclists and walkers on the North Shore have an iconic new connection over the Northern Motorway and directly into Albany. The striking red Tirohanga Whānui Bridge which means 'panoramic view' reconnects the community between the East Coast Bays and Albany.

It enables people to walk and cycle safely and gives better access to the nearby Albany Station and business area.

The $10M bridge includes a new watermain which has been installed directly underneath the bridge, to help cater for the growing needs of the area over the next 40 years. It links to a new pump station and existing water reservoir at Corinthian Drive.

The bridge lights up at night making it a stand out feature for people travelling towards the city. It is part of work to build over 7kms of walking and cycling paths for the Northern Corridor Improvements project.